

Hello there, I think taking the traffic radio stations off XM is a bad idea. Here are a few reasons why.

First, they are updating 24 hours a day with very specific traffic and weather updates. They don't wait around to tell the news like other AM and FM radio stations do. If I wanted the news, I would listen to a news station on XM. When I want to listen to the traffic and weather updates, I want it now, not in 15-20 minutes like all AM and FM radio stations.

Second, I pay for the service that only XM can provide, and I like everything that they provide. I can listen to some music no matter where I am, and listen to the news, weather, traffic. Whatever I want. And with my traveling to NYC, Philia, and Baltimore and DC, It is nice to not have to change radio stations because of distance from station. And no matter what the weather is outside, I don't have to worry about AM or FM signals being affected by the weather. XM uses a higher frequency and modulation rate that is not affected by the weather or distance.

I know that if you take traffic and weather off XM, it will not go over lightly to over a million people who listen to XM radio. You will be hurting yourselves in the long run. Thank you for your time.
